Rectifier rescue: Measure RR bond funds at work

Ever lose your phone charger? It's disheartening to watch your smartphone's battery percentage slowly creeping toward zero with no way to recharge it. You may not know exactly how the charger works, but you know you gotta have it!

BART trains are in a similar predicament. They need 1,000 volts DC to power their motors. An electrical device called a rectifier helps them get it. Like a phone charger, our rectifiers convert the alt... See More

More than two dozen small business owners turned out Thursday to learn about contracting opportunities at BART, particularly those funded by the $3.5 billion voter-approved Measure RR bond.

"Small businesses are the backbone of what we do at BART," Joseph Towner of BART's Office of Civil Rights told the group. "We're here to answer your questions and make it easier for you to contract with us."

The meeting in Walnut Creek was among dozens being held around the region to make...

The bond allows us to get serious about a massive project that will pay off in the decades to come. A second Transbay Tube. 🚇 RR provides seed money for the initial studies required to move forward. We'll be examining governance, funding, alignment, and partnership options.

Get a glimpse in this video of the Measure RR bond funded track work crews are conquering near West Oakland. We rigged cameras to all sorts of equipment and interviewed crew members to showcase the tremendous effort taking place around the clock to quickly get the job done in time to reopen for the weekday commute. You'll also learn why we must close the track for this work.

The new infrastructure being put in is meant to double if not triple the life span of critical track ... See More

Our Measure RR funded track rebuilding work in Oakland that is taking place this weekend is on schedule. This works rips out the 40+ year old track components and puts in new infrastructure. This is why we must close the track for the weekend. We can't get it done in the few overnight hours we're closed.

The first year of BART's Measure RR bond-funded rebuilding work is already paying off for our riders. BART's on-time performance rate has increased to 93.6%. That's BART's highest on-time rate in four years and is thanks in part to the infrastructure improvements supported by RR along with several years of greater attention to incident management, quality maintenance, and system rehabilitation. As we roll out more projects, we anticipate the on-time performance to improve ... See More

We've wrapped up our Measure RR bond funded track work near West Oakland and there are no other planned track shutdowns for 2018. We'll be back at it in 2019. Replacing infrastructure before there is a problem is at the heart of our rebuilding efforts. Crews did a tremendous job.

One of the busiest and bumpiest sections of BART trackway received a makeover during the Memorial Day weekend. BART crews worked 12-hour shifts to replace track, install a new drainage system, and much more on the trackway between the Pleasant Hill/Contra Costa Centre and Concord Stations. The immediate payoff is a smoother ride for tens of thousands of riders.
